The crucial moments in the story. (Exodus: Julie Bertagna)

These are the situations, which were the turning points in the story. (= title! → not necessary)

An important scene in the story is, when Mara, the main character of the story, gets to know from Tain that the seas are rising and the people in Wing have to react as soon as possible. Mara finding out about the New World is also an unforgettable and a crucial moment. In addition, there is an other most important part in the story. It is nothing else but the people in the village deciding to leave Wing for their safety.

"Listen to me, Mara. Your future is not here on Wing", says Tain. Tain explained Mara, if they don't react and don't leave Wing, there will be a big amount of lost on this island. The ice at the poles are melting. They had to go, before the ocean rises and swallow the lands. The storms, which are common in Wing, will make it much more difficult to survive. The answer (which Tain gave for Mara's question, where they can find a new home, changed Mara's mindset and made her see the whole situation in Wing from an other view. He told her about the giant cities built high above the rising seas. From there on, she started to research and to think about, what if those cities do really exist.

Even though she believed on the giant the cities, she needed evidence. She used for that the cyberwizz. With that she wizzed far beyond the realworld and travelled through the strands of electronical weaves. In this unrealistic visuals she saw the New World. She couldn't believe the cybervision, a city with gigantic towers. The cyberfox that she also met in the vision, confirmed that the city really exist and that it is called "New Mungo". After this vision, she used again the cyberwizz to gather proves about the existence of New Mungo.

The other important moment in the story made Mara and the people in Wing leave the island. The big storm vanished the under part of Wing. The giant wave killed lives. Somehow some of them managed to survive. All the population of Wing went to the church on the hillside, which was just above the village. That was the place, where they could be safe. As everyone was in the church, Mara told the village about her discovery, about New Mungo. She shows them the evidence, that she has found. First not everyone agreed to leave Wing and to find a refuge in New Mungo, a city far away from Wing. But at last they decided to leave their home and to believe in Mara's discovery. They also didn't have a better solution for their critical situation.

Mara getting information from Tain about the giant cities and she finding more proves (proofs) about the New City are one of the most important moments in the story. That is how her hope, that there is safety place on the planet, grew. They also made the islanders make a decision, which changed their life. They also made the islanders make a place of safety.
