

Success

No success has been achieved without hard work being done in advance. It has to be something achieved before one is even able to become successful. Even if it was not the affected person who achieved it in the first place, if it was their parents who made it happen and their child had the luck to inheritate their success they still have to try to keep it up otherwise they will loose what was once theirs. Success therefore has to be achieved and constantly groomed.

Nowadays success is one of the most important matters in life. In our society mainstream has become one of the biggest issues people deal with and it has become almost everyone's goal to stand out. But it is harder in realisation than it is in theory. You cannot stand out with your piercings or tattoos because most of the people from our generation got at least one as well. You cannot stand out with your fancy dyed hair because people are used to even the craziest of colors. You cannot stand out with travelling around the world, because the majority of school absolvents decide to do a gap year before university to explore the world. You cannot even stand out with your own style of clothing, because what you like is probably in at the moment anyway. So people try to achieve something in life, something they would stand out for, something almost nobody has achieved or done so far, so society would be awestruck at their achievements - at their success.

As already mentioned success is not that easy to achieve. There is a lot of hard work behind every single success. In addition it is hard to keep focusing on your goal if there is hard times where you probably just want to give up or do not know if it is really worth it in the end. That is the reason why successful people are often determined, ambitious and dauntless. Most of them started small and unspectacular. Sometimes even that poor, they had no extra money and had to save up every single penny. With their determination and ambition they made it all the way up to the top. They know how hard it is to fight for something and also know what hard work really means.

But there is also other successful people besides the hard-working and determined ones who once started at the really bottom of the chain. There is people out in this world who are extremely talented. They were gifted with this specific talent and most of them know, once they figure out that there might be a talent present, how to use it in the right way. It can for sure be that those people show some kind of advantage compared to people without any special talent. But talent alone does not have to mean that one is successful as well. It might mean an advantage to some extent but determination, ambition and a risk appetite have to be present moreover if one does not want to waste their talent.

In conclusion, we can state that success is something special in our society nowadays. Each and every one wants to stand out in their own way and achievements in sports or work is one of the keys how to become successful and to stand out. Keys for success are determination, ambition and a risk appetite. There is a lot of hard work behind every success and if someone is gifted with a talent they still have to focus on those three key objectives to not waste their talent but use it in the best way possible. Success is not easy to reach but we all are capable to achieve something if it is really important to us.
